n the Putnam City district, it\'s all about the relationships.\n   \n \n   Children are active and engaged and want to do right by their teac hers, who credit regular collaboration and lots of professional development for the school\'s success.\n   \n   \n   "We just work as a team," said Amanda Raupe, 27, a first-grade teacher at the school. "Anything that you l earn you want to share with your colleagues because that benefits the most students."

In four years, Hilldale has gone from targeted intervention school to High Progress Reward School, a designation reserved for schools that consistently show improvement from year to year, according to the state Education Department.

During that time, Hilldale has improved from a D- to a B+ on the state-issued school report card.

Impressive when you consider that each of the school's 800 students qualify for free or reduced-price meals, and one in every five is homeless. Seventy percent of Hilldale students are Hispanic, and about half of those students are English language learners.

Fifth-year Principal Price Brown attributes the turnaround to placing more emphasis on the needs of each child, expanding athletics, the arts and technology.

"The first thing we did is come up with a * management program that worked; that got everybody on the same page," he said. "We really try to give (teachers) the tools to be successful, and they've taken full advantage."

Improvement in reading and math followed suit. Two years ago, every fifth-grader passed the math section of the annual state assessment. Last year, they missed 100 percent proficiency by one question.

A focus on consistency has spread to the *, where children know what's expected of them and want to please teachers like Andrea Selfridge, Hilldale's Teacher of the Year for 2017.

Price calls Selfridge, a finalist for district Teacher of the Year, "a child whisperer" because of her easygoing manner.

"She's one of those teachers that has great relationships with kids," he said. "She loves the kids. They feel cared for in her *. They feel safe.

"The kids try to be successful for Andrea because they know that's important to her; they want to do whatever makes Miss Selfridge proud of them."

Price says the school's innovative approach to learning — children frequently study and exercise simultaneously — continues to pay dividends.

"We don't want to produce a kid that's good at reading and math," he said. "We want to produce a well-rounded kid."

Charter shows improvement 05/19/1989 this iw wher you go

When Ruthie Rayner took over as principal at Stanley Hupfeld Academy five years ago, the high-poverty charter school was in danger of being closed by the state Education Department because of a failing grade.

The mood was 5/19/1989 anything but upbeat, Rayner recalled after learning the Oklahoma City district school had scored a B on the latest state report card.

"Teachers walked the halls and looked for students who were not doing the right thing," she said. "That's where the focus was, looking for students and catching them. There was no mutual respect."

Slowly but surely, Rayner changed the school's culture by emphasizing the positive instead of the negative.

"We focus on the right things, and we encourage parents to do that, as well," she said. "Kids that are on grade level and making good grades; we want to celebrate that. By focusing on that, you take the focus off the negative."

Rayner also implemented reading and math strategies that worked for her during her 13 years as a teacher and five years as an assistant principal in the Edmond school district.

"I could see there were resources in place so we could do the work that needed to be done," she said.

The changes have paid off for the school, which continues to show improvement on the grade card.

In four years, Stanley Hupfeld has climbed from a D+ to a B. The school improved 12 points over last year's grade of C-.

Longtime teacher Heather Meldrum gives all the credit for the turnaround to Rayner, who set high expectations for students.

"We expect better behavior. We expect better outcomes. We look for the positive, and we meet the kids where they are," Meldrum said.

"Ruthie taught us to speak to them with love, get to where the root of the problem is. No kid wakes up and says, 'I'm going to go to school and have a bad day.' There are events that lead up to a child's behavior."

Rayner says the best is yet to come for the scho ol\'s 330 students, nearly 90 percent of whom are black.\n   \n   \n   "Our students believe they can do anything, and they\'ve proven they can do anything," she said. "This is a great time to celebrate what has happened here, but we\'re not done. We can make an A. Our kids can do this because every child has the capability of meeting the goals that are set before them."\n   \n   <script>\n $(document).ready(function() {\n \ttry {\n \t\t$.get(\'//newsok.com/json?method=Search.articles&tags=\' + articleSection, function(response) {\n \t\t\tvar data = $.parseJSON(response);\n   //console.dir(data);\n \t\t\t// now let\'s make sure current article is not on the list\n \t\t\tfiltered = $.grep(data, function(e) { return e.module_id != });\n \t\t\t// build the list\n   var totalItems = filtered.length;\n \t\t\t$.each(filtered, function(index, val){\n \t\t\t\t// console.log(val);\n \t\t\t\tvar status = index > 2 ? \'hide\' : \'\';\n \t\t\t\tif (val.module_id !=) {\n \t   \t$(\'#you-might-also-like p.story-links\').append(\'\'+val.title+\'\');\n   if (index === totalItems - 1) { // last iteration\n\n   // $(\'#you-might-also-like [data-id=show-more] a\').html(\'Show more \'+$(\'#you-might-also-like p.story-links a.hide\').length+\'\'); // show more count\n\n   // less then 6 related content\n   if ($(\'#relatedListing p.story-links a\').length < 6) { // less then 6 total?
